Giving Back with Aloha

Visitors to Hawai'i Island often remark about what a special place it is. The unique landscape plays an important role, as do the many islandwide activities from which to choose, from touring an active volcano to playing championship golf to myriad ocean sports. But it's really the people who live here that make the biggest difference.

"There's a true spirit of aloha here," says Scott Head, Vice President of Resort Operations for Waikoloa Beach Resort. "You feel a welcoming graciousness from just about everyone you meet."

Such aloha is deep-rooted in the Hawai'i Island community, and it manifests in many ways. Two shining examples are the Hawai'i Lodging & Tourism Association Charity Walk and the Kona Marathon, both of which take place at Waikoloa Beach Resort and support vital charity and non-profit work on the island.

CHARITY WALK—May 12

The Charity Walk (www.HawaiiLodging.org/charity-walk.html) started almost 40 years ago on Oahu, and today takes place on every major island over a three-week period in May. Participants encourage their friends and family to "sponsor" their walk with cash donations. Last year alone more than $2 million was raised throughout the state — the most in the event's history — benefitting some 50 different organizations, with all money raised on Hawai'i Island being earmarked for local use.

Hawai'i Island residents as well as resort guests turn out in great numbers to support both the Charity Walk and the Kona Marathon.

"It takes an army to put on this kind of event and we are very fortunate that there are so many people who are willing and able to donate their time to put this event on," says Steve Yannarell, General Manager of Waikoloa Beach Marriott Resort & Spa, the host hotel of Charity Walk on Hawai'i Island. "Planning starts in January with committee meetings, kick off events, sponsor meetings, and so forth. It also requires a commitment from Waikoloa Land Company to allow these events that are so important to the community to take place at the resort. A big mahalo needs to be given for that."

More than 3,000 people are expected to participate this year, with many different ways to get involved. "This is a community event that is meant to benefit family, friends, and neighbors on Hawai'i Island," Yannarell says. "By including walkers, runners and making it family friendly, it provides the opportunity to have so many participate. This year we will also have more than 15 food booths, with all the hotels along the Kohala Coast participating and restaurants from the Queens' MarketPlace, Kings' Shops, and the Shops at Mauna Lani."

The majority of the Charity Walk participants will be local, however most hotels put information in their lobbies the week prior to the event encouraging guests to participate.

KONA MARATHON—June 24

The Kona Marathon (www.KonaMarathon.com) also delivers significant support for local causes such as Special Olympics of West Hawaii, Susan G Komen for the Cure Hawaii, and PATH, Share the Road with Aloha, but does so by drawing runners to the island for one of the most anticipated marathon events of the year.

Founded in 1994, the Kona Marathon has evolved into one of Hawai'i's premiere road race events, offering all four traditional distances: Marathon, 1/2 Marathon, Quarter Marathon and 5K. All four races start and finish at the Waikoloa Bowl at Queens' MarketPlace. The 5K is routed along shaded Waikoloa Beach Drive, while the Marathon, Half Marathon and Quarter Marathon runners will continue onto Queen Ka'ahumanu Highway, running a portion of the famous Ironman World Championship bike route before returning to the Waikoloa Beach Resort and the welcoming throng of spectators at the finish line.

Celebrating their 25th anniversary in 2018, more than 1,700 participants are expected this year over the four races. "We usually run 30-35 percent local runners and 65-70 percent runners from out of state," says event director Sharron Faff. "Every year we have at least 48 states represented and 15-20 different countries. This event brings in more than $10 million to the Hawaiian economy every year."

Faff says the location is of top priority to the success of the event and having a host hotel such as the Hilton Waikoloa Village is of utmost importance: "It provides a beautiful place for runners to stay, but also has the facilities that are needed, such as a large convention center for the Health and Fitness Fair and other event activities. Both of these need to be perfectly matched for the success of an event this large."

The free and open to the public Health and Fitness Fair includes 40 different booths, including running gear, race supplies, health and fitness booths, and more. "It's one of the ways we try to encourage everyone to participate, including keiki and families," Faff says.

In addition to attracting serious marathoners, the Kona Marathon has been a great boon for local organizations. "We never turn a charity down," Faff says. "Special Olympics has been doing an Aid Station for us for 25 years. Keauhou Canoe Club handles two of our Aid Stations and has for 25 years. Others donate their time as a community outreach. As with the Charity Walk, participants solicit donations which are then given to the charity directly."

"These events and others we host throughout the year are wins for the community, wins for the events, and wins for the organizations that benefit," says Waikoloa Beach Resort's Scott Head. "Now that's giving back with aloha."

"Both the Charity Walk and the Kona Marathon require a commitment from Waikoloa Land Company to allow these events that are so important to the community to take place at the resort."

BOB MAY GOLF ACADEMY

June 15 - July 15

Waikoloa Kings' Course

Noted golf instructor and former PGA Tour pro Bob May will bring his Golf Academy to Waikoloa Beach Resort from June 15 - July 15, offering island golfers and resort guests a chance to learn from the man who "schooled" Tiger Woods in the 2000 PGA Championship at Valhalla.

May pushed Tiger to the limit in a three-hole playoff that ultimately went to Woods, but the golf world never forgot May's tenacity and fortitude. May's approach to teaching includes both the physical and mental aspects of the game, and is geared to all players, from accomplished sticks to high-handicap players to juniors. From fundamentals to finesse, May's instruction is inspired by and emphasizes the importance of what he calls "a passion for the game."

In 1991, he was a finalist in the British Amateur, and—with Walker Cup teammates Phil Mickelson and David Duval—defeated the European team. That same year, May turned pro, playing competitively on the PGA Tour and Nationwide Tour (now the Web.com Tour) for over 20 years, winning the British Masters in 1999, achieving four second-place titles on the Web.com Tour and three on the PGA Tour, including the unforgettable match with Tiger Woods.

May will be giving private hourly lessons for adults, juniors, couples, as well as nine-hole playing lessons. Using the Trackman swing performance analysis, May will tune up your swing and provide his unique insights into how to be successful on the golf course, based on his more than 20 years of experience on Tour.
