Music of the Islands

HENRY KAPONO’S POSITIVE WORLD VIEW

—Henry Kapono,
“Welcome 2 My Paradise”

THE TITLE OF HENRY KAPONO’S LATEST RELEASE, “Welcome 2 My Paradise,” tells you everything you need to know about how this now-iconic Hawaiian musician is feeling about life these days. His 20th solo album, the compilation of songs on W2MP, including the reflective title composition, reveals a lifelong love affair with his island home that has rounded in recent years into a lasting appreciation for the beauty, people, and culture of Hawai‘i.

But as much as the songs are a tribute to the paradise that surrounds him, they are about the state of mind that allows him to celebrate the simple magic of every day.

“Welcome 2 My Paradise celebrates everything I feel about love, family, friends, travel, people and FUN!” Kapono says on his website. “To be inspired and to celebrate every day and in every way is My Paradise! I take it with me everywhere and share it with everyone every chance I get. I am fortunately blessed and extremely grateful. Music has been my religion, my world, my Paradise. Welcome.”

SCHOOL OF HARD KNOCKS

Born and raised in Kapahulu, O`ahu, in 1948, young Henry started singing in a children’s church choir at age 5. He was a talented athlete who earned a baseball scholarship to the Punahou Academy and a football scholarship to the University of Hawai`i. Injuries prevented a career as a professional football player, but moved him toward his passion for music and allowed him to fully realize his potential as an artist.

He had no formal musical training, though he says, “My dad taught me how to play the `ukulele. I saw a friend of mine play a guitar one day and fell in love with the sound of it. He taught me a few chords and I’ve been hooked ever since.”

His blessings may be apparent now, some 50 years later, but as a young musician — before he and Cecilio Rodriguez formed the groundbreaking duo Cecilio & Kapono in the 1970s — Kapono was paying his dues in the school of hard knocks.

In his 20s, he signed on with a local rock band for what was supposed to be a six-week tour playing gigs in Asia. That turned into a two-year odyssey when the tour promoter went bankrupt, stranding the band without enough money to buy tickets home to Hawai`i.

“We ended up in Vietnam and Thailand for a year,” he tells, “playing for the troops. I’d be playing my guitar eight, 10, 12 hours a day. That’s all I had to do. I was a way better musician when I made it home than when I left. Cecilio and I never would have gotten together if not for that experience.

“I was so happy to get back to Hawai`i after Vietnam,” Kapono tells. “It changed my whole perspective on life. I had matured as a human being, and learned a lot in the school of hard knocks.”

As a duo, Cecilio & Kapono brought a new perspective to Hawaiian music at a time when a renaissance in the native culture was surging. They recorded 13 albums together starting in the 1970s, and gained countless fans with their enthusiastically received live performances. Their signature sound — a Hawaiian folk rock blend that incorporated strands of soul and reggae that has been called a “soundtrack to those years” — earned them a national contract with Columbia Records.

“There was something very magical with Cecilio,” Kapono says. “We were singing about the lifestyle everyone was living. Even today when I play one of those songs, I see people go right back to that important place in their lives.”

GIVING BACK

Kapono launched his solo career in 1981 and has since won multiple honors and awards, including a Grammy nomination.

He has taken home 18 Nā Hōkū Hanohano Awards (“Hawai`i’s Grammy”) including Male Vocalist of the Year, Song of the Year, Single of the Year, Album of the Year, and Rock Album of the Year. In 2016, along with John Cruz and Brother Noland, he won Best EP for his Rough Riders “We Ride” CD.

Nowadays, in addition to releasing new music — he has another new, as-yet-untitled CD of classics and “songs you grew up singing” slated to come out by the end of 2019 — and playing live to appreciative audiences at venues such as Lava Lava Beach Club at Waikoloa Beach Resort, Kapono’s main endeavors revolve around supporting younger musicians and providing life lessons through the Henry Kapono Foundation.

“It’s a blessing to give back,” he says. “My wife Lezlee and I have produced a lot of events, and last year First Hawaiian Bank supported us in launching a foundation so we could direct some of the event revenue to causes we care about. We started by offering scholarships to help artists who needed help. It’s very fulfilling to see it happening.”

He points to one young songwriter, Kevin Davis, whom he met at The Hawai`i Songwriting Festival, an event that the Henry Kapono Foundation supported on the Big Island in June, as an example of how he enjoys mentoring up-and-coming artists. “I shared my thoughts on how a story should develop,” he says, “how to lay back in important parts of the song so your audience rides with you. You have to own it, know it. You have to have a vision.”

Another event produced by Kapono Inc. called Artist-2-Artist features iconic performers such as Keola Beamer, Brother Noland, and others. The featured artists are available for younger musicians and festival attendees to speak with and get to know as people.

Through these efforts, as well as through his music, Henry Kapono is making a difference in the world, and that may be his most fulfilling accomplishment of all.

“Change is inevitable,” he says. “It happens everywhere. The most important thing is now. What was, was. What is, is. Try to make positive changes now. I have younger kids, and want to leave them a positive world. You gotta keep trying.” ■

Henry Kapono performs at Don’s Mai Tai Bar in the Royal Kona Resort every third Thursday of the month, and the third Friday of every month at Lava Lava Beach Club. Check the schedule at LavaLavaBeachClub.com, and find out more about Henry on his website HenryKapono.com.

“Boat Day Aloha” is a colorful scenic and one of the most iconic shirts available at TORI RICHARD in Kings' Shops. The artwork came from the library of Matson Navigation Company, which houses original and famous early 20th century works from Hawaiian artists such as John Kelly, Frank McIntosh, Eugene Savage, Arman Manookian, and Louis Macouillard.

HAWAIIAN `UKULELE & GUITAR in Queens' MarketPlace carries a wide variety of Hawai'i's signature stringed instrument, many of which are custom made by luthiers across the islands. In addition to `ukulele, you'll find guitars, banjos and bajoleles, with a large selection of sheet music, CDs, DVDs, books, strings, and accessories.

STORE SPOTLIGHT NOA NOA

Joan Smoyer is an original at Kings' Shops. Her store, Noa Noa, was an original tenant when the shopping center opened in 1991, and it remains a popular destination for resort guests to this day.

What's inside is also original: an eclectic mix of one-of-a-kind shirts and clothing items, batiked tapa, and what she calls “artifacts,” including ceremonial masks from Indonesia, jewelry from Morocco, and Chinese ceramics.

Smoyer designs all the fabrics and styles carried in the store herself, drawing inspiration from Pacific Ocean cultures. A 40-yard bolt of all natural fabric is batiked with the design at her factory in Bali and then stitched into a shirt or other item of clothing. That design is then retired, making each garment unique.

“It's an interactive place,” Smoyer says of Noa Noa, which means “fragrant place” and is borrowed from the name of Paul Gauguin's diary of his time in Tahiti. “We like to personally connect with our customers, tell the story of the items in the store, and allow them to decide what resonates.”

With additional outlets in Honolulu, and 28 years of success at Kings' Shops, it's clear that Joan Smoyer's vision resonates with quite a few people.

Made from scratch deliciousness!

Roy's Waikoloa Bar & Grill

OPENED IN 1996 AND STILL ONE OF THE BEST RESTAURANTS ON Hawai'i Island, Roy's Waikoloa Bar & Grill never disappoints. Guests can return year after year and find many of their favorite dishes on the menu, such as the grilled Szechuan-spiced baby back ribs appetizer, the macadamia nut-crusted Hawaiian mekajiki fish entree, and the always-divine melting hot dark chocolate soufflé for dessert.

"But you can't rest on your laurels," says General Manager Arnie McLain. "We're always trying new things to keep our customers engaged and coming back."

For instance, a recent beer dinner with Big Island Brewhaus was so popular that a repeat performance is on the books for October (call for exact date). Monthly wine dinners have proven popular with locals as well as resort visitors. And a "Putts & Pupus" offering that combines a round on the adjacent Lakeside Putting Course followed by a round of drinks and appetizers is now offered every third Thursday evening of the month.

"Roy has always had a commitment to quality and supporting the local farmers," McLain says. "We honor that here in every way, from the classic dishes to the excellent customer service. But we're always looking for ways to stay one step ahead."

RESORT FLAVORS

TAI ONE ON

The beloved mai tai is Hawai'i's signature drink, and it has a history as colorful as its sunset hues. Some accounts insist that Donn Beach invented the iconic tropical concoction for his tiki-themed Don the Beachcomber locations, while others claim that Vic Bergeron of Trader Vic's was the creator. The two men disputed the origin story vociferously over the years. One thing that's not in dispute is the immense popularity of the rums-plus-fruit-juices drink. At Waikoloa Beach Resort, guests can find excellent mai tai variations at Mai Grille in the Kings' Golf Course clubhouse (served with an extra-thick straw to suck up the freshly muddled pineapple at the base); Foster's Kitchen at Kings Shops (where "from scratch" is taken seriously); and Kuleana Rum Shack in Queens' MarketPlace ("It's like aromatherapy," says bartender Jules [pictured left]). "We use fresh squeezed lime juice, three rums, absinthe, bitters, fresh mint). Try 'em all ... just not in one evening please!"
