Winging It

Avian Friends at Waikoloa Beach Resort and Beyond

The annual migration of the Humpback whale is celebrated in the Hawaiian Islands, and sightings are reported on the nightly news when the big mammals begin to arrive in local waters each fall. The Pacific Golden Plover (kolea in Hawaiian) makes the same migration between Hawai'i and Alaska each year, heading north in spring and south in fall. Though they are not rock stars like the Humpbacks, their journey is perhaps even more amazing, as they wing their way thousands of miles without any land on which to stop, rest, and refuel.

SHORELINE AND GOLF COURSE BIRDS

"The Pacific Golden Plover is quite a remarkable bird," says Lance Tanino, founder of Manu Conservation Birding and Nature Tours and one of the leading birding experts in Hawai'i. "They fly non-stop for three or four days to nest in the tundra of Alaska, and make the return trip to Hawai'i starting around August. The adults come first with the juvenile birds following shortly thereafter."

Seen regularly around the waterfront areas and golf courses of Waikoloa Beach Resort, Tanino says the Pacific Golden Plover (pictured inset above) is one of the few native species to have thrived after human contact, as the clearing of the underbrush near the beaches and the ponds and grassy areas of the golf courses make excellent habitat for these birds.

Another frequent visitor to Waikoloa's golfing greens is Hawai'i's state bird, the Nēnē Goose (pictured above). A year-round resident in the islands, the Nēnē is still considered an endangered species, but their population has increased significantly since the 1940s when — due to relentless human hunting and the introduction of mongooses and feral cats to the state — they were effectively extinct in the wilds, and estimates put the number of birds at fewer than 10.

A captive breeding program centered on Hawai'i Island, coupled with another breeding program in England, managed to rescue the seen at dawn and dusk. Whether sitting on a fencepost, gliding on a breeze, or gracefully winging in wide circles hunting for mice in the tall grasses, the pueo is instantly recognizable. They are often spotted on the old Saddle Road near Waikī'i Ranch, their white faces and brilliant yellow-green eyes glaring back as you slow your car to

The pueo plays a special role in Hawaiian mythology, and is considered an 'aumakua, a spirit guardian, by many families in the islands.

It is always amusing to see a tall, slender white bird standing on the back of a horse or cow. These are Cattle Egrets, common in the green ranchlands of Hawai'i Island's upcountry. Originally from Africa, these birds were brought to Hawai'i in 1959 specifically to control the insect population, a job they do very well.

Other birds commonly spied in the middle elevations of Hawai'i Island are several species of Francolin Quail, wild turkey, California Quail, the Kalij Pheasant, and Ring-necked Pheasant, all introduced for sport hunting in previous centuries. Common songbirds include the lovely Saffron Finch, and the bright red Northern Cardinal.

If you are a dedicated birder, you might want to check out the new Palila Forest Discovery Trail, recently opened on the western slope of Mauna Kea mountain by the Hawaii Division of Forestry and Wildlife. The trail is accessed from the Kilohana Hunter Station check-in area off the old Saddle Road. A four-mile 4-wheel-drive road leads to the trailhead, and from there signage points you to a mile-long hike through old-growth sandalwood trees and a yellow-flowered māmane forest to a habitat where the Palila, as well as several other species of birds, can be seen and heard.

Significant because the Palila are the last of the finch-billed honeycreepers found in the state, these highly endangered birds sport yellow head and chest feathers. Their numbers have been decreasing in recent years due to extended drought, invasive species, and habitat degradation. Only about 2,000 birds remain, all in this unique habitat on the slopes of Mauna Kea.

Nēnē from extinction, and by the late 1970s there were more than 2,000 of the distinctive geese with deeply furrowed neck feathers in captivity and ready to be released into the wild once again.

"They are doing better with the extensive protection by the federal and local authorities," Tanino says, "and they love the short grass of the golf courses." But Tanino also points out that golfers need to understand that the Nēnē are sometimes territorial and they should avoid contact with them or their chicks.

Another unique bird that guests at Waikoloa Beach Resort will also observe is the Black-crowned Night Heron ('auku'u), a non-endangered resident bird that likes to sit on tree snags or stalk the lava rocks above the tidepools looking for fish. With its long legs and sturdy gray body, this bird appears almost hunched as it patiently and quietly goes about its business of catching fish.

"Interestingly" says Tanino, "the Black-crowned Night Heron has learned to attract fish using bread. It'll drop the bread in the water and wait for fish to come take the bait."

Keen-eyed birders can also spot the Ruddy Turnstone ('akekeke), the Sanderling (huna kai, literally translated as "sea foam"), and the Wandering Tattler ('ulili), all migrating visitors to Hawai'i's shores. And if you're really lucky, on the deserted stretches of sand south of Lava Lava Beach Club, you may catch sight of the elusive Bristle-thighed Curlew (kioea, named for the loud whistling sound it makes), a long-billed bird that prefers solitude as it molts all of its flight feathers before migration and is flightless and vulnerable to predators for a period of time.

UPCOUNTRY BIRDS

In the cattle grazing lands and ranches further upcountry from Waikoloa Beach Resort and Waikoloa Village, the pueo, or Short-eared Owl, is frequently

MALIBU SHIRTS

In the timeless, "Endless Summer" of vintage surf culture and Hawaiiana, some things never grow old. Malibu Shirts, the latest member of the Queens' MarketPlace family of shops, is a flashback to a golden-oldie era, bringing favorite old school logos and imagery to casual retro fashion.

Malibu Shirts creates what they call "high-end garments inspired by history, resulting in comfortable clothes with stories to tell." Along with tees and hoodies, they also offer hats, stickers, vintage posters, metal signs and more, featuring the memorable designs of Primo, Pan Am, TWA, Airstream, The Monkees (who played their first concert in Hawai'i), the Grateful Dead, classic drive-ins, hotels, surf clubs, and steamships.

The first Malibu Shirt was printed in 2004 — for Malibu Surf Club, a small but dedicated group of surfers such as Les Williams. Today, they operate three shops on Oahu and two on Maui. The Queens' MarketPlace location, which opened July 2, is their sixth store, the first on Hawai'i Island.

Each individual store pays tribute to its unique place in the sun, showcasing items from a vast collection of historic surfing memorabilia, trophies, photos, boards, books, records, posters, vintage competition tees, and club sweatshirts. Included are items won, worn, or owned by some of the sport's biggest names: Duke Kahanamoku, Tom Blake, Dale Velzy, Marge Calhoun, Les Williams, "Rabbit" Kekai, Fred Hemmings, Larry "Rubber Man" Bertlemann, Miki Dora, and many, many more.

For Queens' MarketPlace, Malibu Shirts developed three new designs: the Kona Inn, the Hawaiian Billfish Series, and "KOA," the airport code for Kona International. In addition, this location exclusively houses one of the best vintage skateboard collections (1950s-70s) in the country.

For more information, call (808) 886-0003 or visit MalibuShirts.com

COMING ATTRACTION! Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas

Queens' MarketPlace will light up island nightlife with the highly-anticipated Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas, an upscale, three-screen movie venue with full-service restaurant and bar. When the curtain goes up in the spring of 2017, movie-lovers will be able to kick back in a cushy leather seat, order a glass of wine and enjoy a first-run feature.

Guests will enter a spacious, contemporary lobby, with a bar and comfy furnishings, including an actual sample of the theaters' leather loveseats to "test drive." A 25-foot passageway of glass doors leads into a 5,000-square-foot outdoor lanai lounge, available to everyone, movie patron or not.

Three exclusive auditoriums, outfitted with cutting-edge sound and projection equipment, seat 85-100 people each, the largest offering Real 3-D technology. Food and beverages — from popcorn and sodas to gourmet snacks, pizza, and cocktails — may be purchased prior to the show, or ordered for delivery to your loveseat.

"The luxury cinema concept has proven to be quite a hit on the Mainland," says Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas owner Tony Dalzell. "So we decided that would be our business model here."

With an MBA and extensive experience in consumer marketing, primarily in the financial services industry in California, Dalzell was also owner-operator of Marina WaterSports, Inc., California's largest watercraft and parasailing attraction. Assisting Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas is theater consultant Scott Stalcup, who has overseen more than 100 projects for AMC Theaters.

Since most of North Hawai'i gets its movie fix in Kona or Honoka'a — or from Netflix on their home sofa — Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas is a date night waiting to happen. The Dalzells easily saw the success potential of adding a theater to Waikoloa Beach Resort nightlife.

"It's no secret that, after dark, one's entertainment options around here are pretty limited," said Dalzell, who moved to the island earlier this year with wife Maria, after visiting annually for two decades. "Retirement was an option, but we both wanted something to do. We're happy that it ended up being something that's a contribution to our new community."

In addition to films, Waikoloa Luxury Cinemas will be available for rentals, concerts, and live performances. It also offers a potential boon for neighboring businesses, and will be providing about 45 new jobs in the community.

Treat yourself to the once-in-a-lifetime cultural immersion of our lu'au at Hilton Waikoloa Village. Brought to you by Tihati Productions, the Legends of Hawai'i Luau dinner and show brings to life the ancestral songs and dances that retell the epic stories of Hawai'i Island and her remarkable people.

You'll receive a lei greeting upon arrival and have the opportunity to capture memories with photos with our lu'au performers. The buffet includes island favorites such as hulihuli chicken, seared island catch-of-the-day and the traditional imu k̄lua pig, and fresh daily Hawaiian style desserts.

Our signature mai tais are made with fresh pineapple juice. And we have a keiki buffet for our friends ages 12-and-under.

General seating prices are $125 plus tax for adults, $68 plus tax for children (ages 5 - 12) and children under 4 are complimentary.
